Summary: Praise for A Table by the Window "Food writer Juliette D'Alisa adores her temperamental, trilingual family of restaurateurs, but she could do without their bossy skepticism of her online love interest who's so unlike them. Rainy, windy Portland has never felt quite as warm as it does when Juliette navigates long-distance romance, career decisions, and a genealogical mystery. A delectable tale from Hillary Manton Lodge, A Table by the Window includes recipes that are like a warm welcome to the D'Alisa family table." --Meg Moseley, author of Gone South and When Sparrows Fall "Warm, witty, and a culinary delight! Hillary Manton Lodge's crisp writing reminds me of a vintage romantic comedy but with contemporary appeal as the story unfolds with perfect pacing and recipes to make you drool. More than once I found myself wishing I had a pastry chef in my own kitchen. Wonderfully romantic in all the best ways!" --Carla Stewart, award-winning author of Chasing Lilacs and Sweet Dreams "Not since Under the Tuscan Sun have I read a book that I both tasted and felt to such an enchanting degree...."
